"Ran Dos" Basking .- We need not say at this day that we are identity to Banking, and of course to solvent. largest liberty in Banking which is consistent with the perhonest, well-managed Banks. We are friendly also to the 1337 our attention was called to the plan of Free Banking we gave this plan a hearty approval. We were in Albany through the ensuing winter, and from first to last gave whatever influence we passessed, with our best exertions, in favor of the passage of the General Banking Law. We have never seen cause to regret this course, but remain warmly principle and effording the basis of great improvements yet

We are of course friendly to the Free Banks; we heartily wish them stability and prosperity; we desire that they should fully enjoy the public confidence, and to that end we wish that a few scurvy sheep might be driven out of the Book, lest their rottenness should taint the whole. And foremost among the iniquities which should be scouted from distant and not easily accessible point, getting out a batch of notes on a deposit of State Stocks, and setting up a shaving business upon them. In this way our citizens have been shamefully a sindled. Banks have been got up, purporting to be located at Buffalo, and other out-of-the-way places, but really located among the brokers and shavers of this City. who emitted their notes at par and bought them is at a discount ranging from one-half to four per cent, according to circusstances. At length a pinch came in the money marker. Stocks fell, and these hopeful bankers stopped payment, leaving the deluded holders of their notes to whistle for their money; their deposites being only sufficient to pay by P. G. Until this is done, the citizens must protect themselves by refusing to take any note which is not regularly redeemed at par at the place wheate it is issued. There should be no compromise or hesitation on this point. The country has been cursed enough with irredeemable currency and shaving; where it is inevitable it must be borne, but here it is not. Let every man do his part fearlessly, and the auisance will be abated.
